

Office of the Attorney General

Presentation to the Senate
Banking and Insurance
Committee

The Problem Today

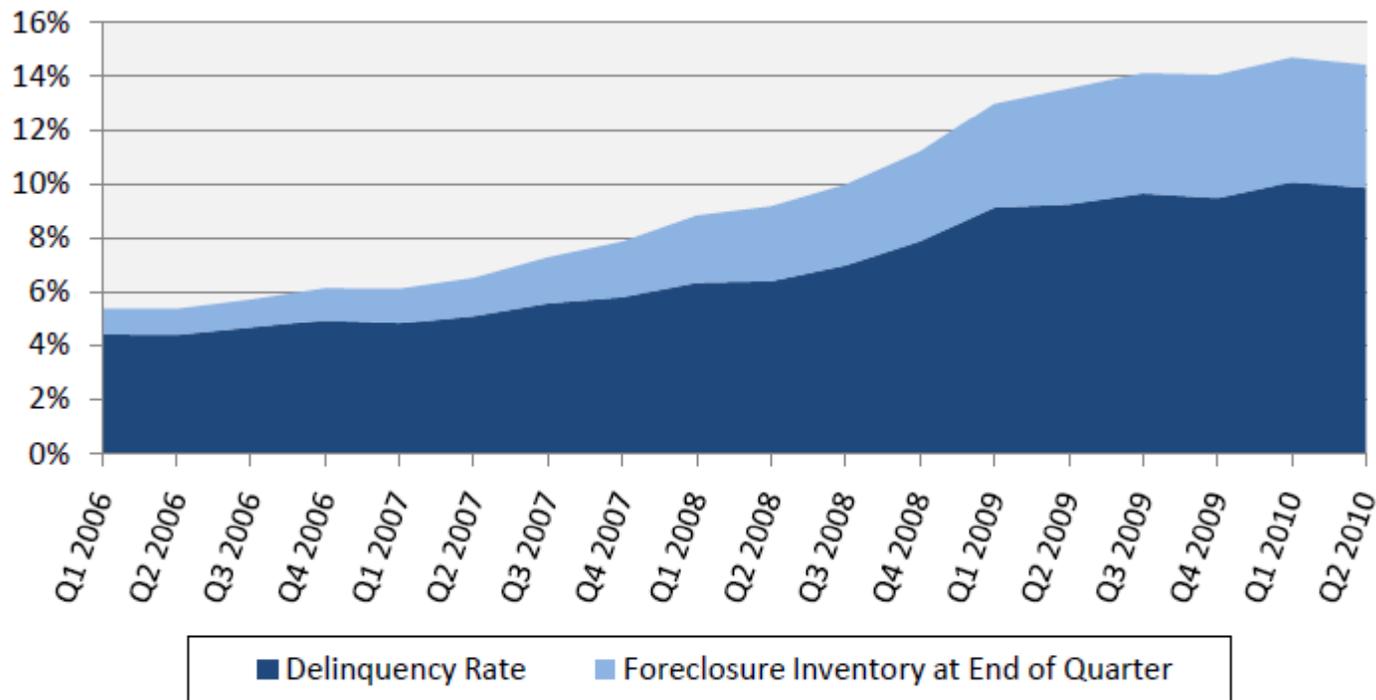

- Florida represents 50 percent of pending foreclosures in the 23 judicial foreclosure states.
- 55,000 of Bank of America's 106,000 pending foreclosures are in Florida.
- Roughly half of JP Morgan Chase's 55,000 pending foreclosures are pending in Florida.

- The Mortgage Bankers Assn announced in November that Florida leads the nation in the percentage of homeowners that are “seriously delinquent” on their mortgages, with 48% of the homeowners underwater on their loans.
- Just last month, a RealtyTrac survey found that, nationally, 48% of homeowners with a mortgage said a strategic default is an option they would consider if they owed more on their home than the house is worth. That is up from 41% in May.

- 42% of South Florida homes were underwater during the 3rd Qtr of 2010 (Zillow), compared to 23% nationally during the same time frame.
- And, the homes going into foreclosure now are not the ones that were purchased with ARMs that the homeowner should never have been able to qualify for, but are the traditional fixed-rate mortgages that in the past were the conservative, less risky loans in the mortgage industry.

- These troubling trends have been closely followed by our office. And, we have been working on several fronts.
- First, we have attempted to deal with issues arising from the massiveness of the foreclosure crisis itself, by pushing the banks to facilitate loan modifications and otherwise change their procedures to do more to assist distressed homeowners in avoiding foreclosure. That has been an ongoing effort of ours since 2008.

- Second, both independently and through the 50-state foreclosure working group, we are looking at the foreclosure process itself to determine ways to return integrity to the process and ensure proper chain of title. It is only when the credibility of the process is restored, that we can be sure that we are seeing the light at the end of the tunnel regarding this crisis

- Finally, since August of 2010, we have had a number of investigations open looking at the recent revelations regarding irregularities in the foreclosure process that have only exacerbated an already enormous problem. These investigations began with the robo-signing revelations last fall but have expanded into other apparent irregularities since.

What to do?

- With the record amounts of loans are in default. Florida needs to work its way through the backlog of defaulted loans to get the properties into the hands of purchasers that can afford them and care for them.
- That can be done through loan modification, foreclosure and resale or short sale.

● But:

- Modifications of loans are not incentivized by market factors, no matter what the servicers might say.
- Foreclosures, usually a relatively simple process, have become a virtual morass of faulty affidavits of indebtedness, faulty, late or non-existent assignments and court rulings that are not favorable to lenders.
- Foreclosure mills have added to this problem rather than being instrumental in solving it.
- Short sales, while desirable economically, get bogged down in bank decision making and investor inaction and may also have title problems if assignments are improper.

Foreclosure Process in Total Disarray

- We are finding as part of our investigation into foreclosure mills and ancillary businesses that:
 - Improperly executed affidavits of indebtedness have been filed in support of summary judgment.
 - Records of assignments of mortgages are hopelessly lost resulting in corrective assignments that are sometimes filed even after the foreclosure sale has occurred.
 - Initially some title companies were reluctant to issue title insurance on foreclosed properties and may be reluctant to do so again because of the following recent decision.

U. S. Bank v. Ibanez - Massachusetts Supreme Court - January 7, 2011

- Court found that U. S. Bank and Wells Fargo had not adequately proven they held the mortgage at the time of foreclosure.
- Assignments were not recorded, nor were there business records that were adequate to establish ownership of the note.
- Attempts to use securitization documents failed as they did not adequately describe the mortgages that were securitized.
- Bank stocks fell significantly on news of the decision.

- U.S. BANK NATIONAL ASSOCIATION, AS TRUSTEE, ET AL
- Plaintiff, vs. CASE NO. SI-2007-CA-6684ES ERNEST E. HARPSTER
- Defendant.
- -----~...~-
- AMENDED ORDER GRANTING MOTION TO COMPEL, GRANTING MOTION IN LIMINE AND GRANTING MOTION FOR REHEARING
- 8) Confirming this, the Notary Bonding Company's representative, Erika Espinoza, stated in a sworn affidavit that the Notary Stamp used by Terry Rice, the Notary, did not exist on the purported date is was notarized. Specifically, Espinoza testified in her affidavit that the notary stamp didn't come into existence until sometime in April 2008. five months after the date on the Assignment.
- 11) The court specifically finds that the purported Assignment did not exist at the time of filing of this action; that the purported Assignment was subsequently created and the execution date and notarial date were fraudulently backdated, in a purposeful, intentional effort to mislead the Defendant and this Court. The Court rejects the Assignment and finds that is not entitled to introduction in evidence for any purpose. The Court finds that the Plaintiff does not have standing to bring its action.

What Can Be Done?

- Restore integrity to the judicial system by making servicers get paperwork right before filing for foreclosure.
- Lenders and investors should incentivize the modification of mortgages rather than foreclosure.
- Streamline short sale procedures.
- Lenders and investors should indemnify title insurance issuers for faulty assignments or other faulty paperwork.
