How Advocates Can Assist Victims of Child Abduction and Their Families

October 20, 2009

Coconut Creek

Tuition - Free

Course No. 520-09-25

Course Time: 8:00 a.m. - 5:00 p.m.

Description: One of the most difficult situations for a victim advocate is to assist families of missing children. The first 48 hours following the report to law enforcement of the disappearance of a child are the most critical in terms of finding and returning the child safely home. In order to effectively assist the parents, victim advocates need to be aware of what parents can expect when their child is missing; what assistance resources are available; the role that various agencies and organizations can provide; and what some of the important issues are that the family may need to consider. Issues to be discussed include: the relationship between the family and law enforcement; missing children's categories; the need for parents and family members to take care of themselves, their children, extended family members and friends; and appropriate information sharing with families, the media and cooperating agencies. Other areas of focus for victim advocates include mentally preparing parents for the long term and steps that families and law enforcement take to forge a constructive partnership in their efforts to find the missing child. This course will provide information on the various programs and support activities available such as the Florida Amber Plan, The Child Identification Program, the Missing Endangered Persons Information Clearinghouse, and the Florida Missing Person's Database.

How Advocates Can Assist Victims of Child Abduction and Their Families

August 4, 2010

Merritt Island

Tuition - Free

Course No. 520-10-13

Course Time: 8:00 a.m. - 5:00 p.m.

Description: One of the most difficult situations for a victim advocate is to assist families of missing children. The first 48 hours following the report to law enforcement of the disappearance of a child are the most critical in terms of finding and returning the child safely home. In order to effectively assist the parents, victim advocates need to be aware of what parents can expect when their child is missing; what assistance resources are available; the role that various agencies and organizations can provide; and what some of the important issues are that the family may need to consider. Issues to be discussed include: the relationship between the family and law enforcement; missing children's categories; the need for parents and family members to take care of themselves, their children, extended family members and friends; and appropriate information sharing with families, the media and cooperating agencies. Other areas of focus for victim advocates include mentally preparing parents for the long term and steps that families and law enforcement take to forge a constructive partnership in their efforts to find the missing child. This course will provide information on the various programs and support activities available such as the Florida Amber Plan, The Child Identification Program, the Missing Endangered Persons Information Clearinghouse, and the Florida Missing Person's Database.

NO SHOW POLICY

Due to the large number of no shows, FCPTI has instituted a no show penalty. Programs will be held accountable should staff register for a course and not attend. By submitting a registration form, the agency listed on the registration form is the responsible party to ensure that the employee attends the training or that a substitute is arranged. If the registrant does not attend the training and has not cancelled in a timely manner (at least two weeks prior to the start date of the training), the following fees will be assessed:

Designation Courses:	$40.00
16-Hour Advocate Courses	$30.00
8-Hour Advocate Courses:	$20.00

In the event the agency feels good cause exists why the registrant could not attend the training, the agency must provide the reason in writing to FCPTI. There will be no exceptions. If it is determined by FCPTI that good cause exists, then the no show fee will be waived. Should a registrant not provide an agency name on the registration form, then the individual registrant will be held responsible for payment of the no show penalty. If this office is unable to collect the no show fee, the agency (or an individual as defined above) will be prohibited from sending staff to future training until the fee has been paid. The agency or individual registrant has 30 days from the end date of the class to submit payment to this office.

ON-SITE TRAINING

Most programs listed can be presented on-site to an agency or group of agencies. When this option is chosen, the training can be customized to meet local needs. In addition, FCPTI can develop a specialized victim services training program to meet the individual needs of an agency or administrative area. Contact FCPTI/Victim Services at (850) 414-3360 for additional information about on-site or specialized training programs.
