RE: GOVERNMENT IN THE SUNSHINE--WHISTLEBLOWERS--PUBLIC RECORDS--OPEN MEETINGS--HILLSBOROUGH TRANSIT AUTHORITY--consideration of confidential information at authority meeting. s. 286.011, Fla. Stat.

Dear Mr. Fletcher:

On behalf of the Hillsborough Transit Authority (HART), you ask substantially the following questions:

1. May the HART board of directors be designated as an appropriate local official permitted to receive complaints and investigative documents under section 112.3188, Florida Statutes?
2. If so, is the board required to consider and take action upon such a complaint at a public meeting pursuant to section 286.011, Florida Statutes?

In sum:

1. The HART board of directors may be designated as the appropriate local official to receive complaints and investigative documents under section 112.3188, Florida Statutes. In light of the discussion in Question Two, however, such designation may not be advisable.
2. The HART board of directors is a collegial public body which must comply with the public meeting requirements in section 286.011, Florida Statutes, when carrying out official business of the authority. Absent a statutory exemption, the handling of confidential information or records during the course of public meetings does not otherwise allow meetings of the board to be closed.

You state that the HART board of directors has adopted an interim procedure naming itself as the appropriate local official to receive certain whistle-blower complaints and to investigate such claims.[1] The board, however, questions whether it may carry out such functions and, if so, whether it must do so at an open meeting.

Question One

The Whistle-blower's Act (act), sections 112.3187-112.31895, Florida Statutes, is intended to prevent agencies, or independent contractors of agencies, from taking retaliatory action against an employee who reports violations of law on the part of a public employer or an independent contractor.[2] It protects any individual "who discloses information to an appropriate agency alleging improper use of governmental office, gross waste of funds, or any other abuse or gross neglect of duty on the part of an agency, public officer, or employee." [3]

In order to qualify as a whistle-blower complaint, particular information must be disclosed to certain statutorily designated officials.[4] The act provides that for disclosures concerning a local governmental entity, such as a county, the information must be disclosed to a chief executive officer as defined in section 447.203(9), Florida Statutes, or "other appropriate local official." [5]

While the term "other appropriate local official" is not defined in the act, this office in Attorney General Opinion 96-40 considered whether a town's ethics commission could be considered within the scope of the term. Recognizing that the use of a singular noun could raise questions of its application to a collegial body, the opinion found that the legislation clearly contemplated that confidential information gathered during the processing of a complaint could be shared with others and still maintain its confidential status.[6] The opinion stated that to read the act otherwise would render its confidentiality provisions useless and negate the protections afforded to individuals who come forward with complaints. Based upon the above, this office concluded that the town's ethics commission constituted an "other appropriate local official." [7]

Here, the board of directors has been named the "appropriate local official" to receive and consider certain whistle-blower complaints. Applying the analysis and conclusion in Attorney General Opinion 96-40 and finding nothing in the Whistle-blower Act that would preclude the appointment of a board to be the appropriate agency official to handle whistle-blower complaints, I would conclude that the HART board of directors may receive and act upon such complaints. In light of the discussion in Question Two, however, such a designation to a collegial body subject to the open meetings requirements in section 286.011, Florida Statutes, may not be advisable.

Question Two

Section 112.3188(1), Florida Statutes, provides:

"(1) The name or identity of any individual who discloses in good faith to the Chief Inspector General or an agency inspector general, a local chief executive officer, or other appropriate local official information that alleges that an employee or agent of an agency or independent contractor:

(a) Has violated or is suspected of having violated any federal, state, or local law, rule, or regulation, thereby creating and presenting a substantial and specific danger to the public's health, safety, or welfare; or

(b) Has committed an act of gross mismanagement, malfeasance, misfeasance, gross waste of public funds, or gross neglect of duty may not be disclosed to anyone other than a member of the Chief Inspector General's, agency inspector general's, internal auditor's, local chief executive officer's, or other appropriate local official's staff without the written consent of the individual, unless the Chief Inspector General, internal auditor, agency inspector general, local chief executive officer, or other appropriate local official determines that: the disclosure of the individual's identity is necessary to prevent a substantial and specific danger to the public's health, safety, or welfare or to prevent the imminent commission of a crime; or the disclosure is unavoidable and absolutely necessary during the course of the audit, evaluation, or investigation."

Moreover, all information received in the course of a whistle-blower investigation is confidential and exempt, if the information is being received or derived from allegations as set forth in paragraph (1)(a) or paragraph (1)(b) of section 112.3188(1) and an investigation is active.[8]

Thus, the act protects the identity of employees and persons who disclose information that can serve as the basis for a whistle-blower complaint, as well as information received in the course of a whistle-blower investigation. The act specifies those to whom confidential information may be disclosed and limits the disclosure of a whistle-blower's identity to specific circumstances. You have not asserted that such circumstances are present.

As a collegial body of a public agency created by law or ordinance, however, the board of directors for HART must take official action at a public meeting which complies with the requirements of section 286.011, Florida Statutes, Florida's Government in the Sunshine Law.[9] Only the Legislature, by general law passed by a two-thirds majority, may provide for the exemption of meetings from the Sunshine Law.[10]

The Supreme Court of Florida has held that in the absence of a statute exempting a meeting in which privileged material is discussed, section 286.011, Florida Statutes, may not be construed to contain any exceptions for such meetings.[11] Section 119.07(7), Florida Statutes, clearly provides that an exemption from the Public Records Law "does not imply an exemption from s. 286.011. The exemption from s. 286.011 must be expressly provided." Thus, exemptions from the Public Records Law do not by implication allow a public agency to close a meeting where exempt records are to be discussed in the absence of a specific exemption from the Sunshine Law.[12]

This office, in an opinion request with confidentiality concerns similar to those you have raised, concluded that a committee created by a public agency and charged with the responsibility of reviewing confidential files was subject to the requirements of section 286.011, Florida Statutes, in the absence of an exemption from the Sunshine Law. The committee involved in Attorney General Opinion 95-65 was established to provide for uniform case review and approval of treatment for emotionally disturbed children and adolescents. In reviewing individual cases, confidential information contained within the clinical files of patients was disseminated to the committee and case managers presented psychiatric and psychological evaluations of children and updated the committee on individual children's progress in treatment. While several statutory exemptions to the Sunshine Law for meetings or portions of meetings at which confidential records must be considered were cited, no exemption from section 286.011, Florida Statutes, was found for the review committees presented in the opinion. The opinion concluded that the meetings at which confidential records were discussed were subject to the Government in the Sunshine Law.

I would also note that in Attorney 2010-04, this office declined to comment on particular procedures for conducting meetings of a school board at which confidential student records would be discussed, but suggested that the school board be sensitive to the confidentiality of such records reviewed during a meeting and protect the records to the extent that is possible to protect the privacy of the student involved. Similarly, the HART board must protect the confidential information it is considering at a meeting and must not disclose the name of the whistle-blower unless one of the specific circumstances listed in the statute is present.[13]

Several statutory provisions exempt meetings of various boards or committees from the Sunshine Law when confidential information is presented or discussed.[14] You have not cited, nor have I found, any statutory provision that would close the meetings of the HART board of directors when it is considering a whistle-blower complaint. Absent a statutory exemption from section 286.011, Florida Statutes, for the HART board of directors when it is considering or acting upon a whistle-blower complaint, the board must otherwise comply with the public meetings requirements of the Sunshine Law and may not close its meetings.

Sincerely,

Pam Bondi
Attorney General
