RE: COUNTIES--TAXATION--WASTE COLLECTION--PUBLIC FUNDS--county must find that collection of waste in unincorporated areas of county constitutes substantial and real benefit to incorporated areas of county in order to use general revenue fund to fund shortfall in waste collection program; determination of public purpose to be made by county commission. s. 1(h), Art. VIII, s. 10, Art. VII, State Const.; s. 125.01, F.S.

Dear Ms. Slay:

You ask on behalf of the county commission substantially the following question:

May the county appropriate, through the budget process, money from the general revenue fund to offset a shortfall in revenues received from the mandatory garbage collection program in the unincorporated areas of the county?

In sum, I am of the opinion:

While the collection of waste, thereby eliminating a source of pollution, may well constitute a substantial benefit to the incorporated areas, such a determination involves questions of fact and mixed questions of law and fact which the county commission must address. Similarly, while the provision of waste collection services constitutes a public purpose for which public funds may be expended, the legislative findings and determination as to the propriety of a particular expenditure is one which the county commission must make, and cannot be delegated to this office.

According to your letter, Gadsden County has adopted a mandatory waste collection ordinance which requires the owner of each occupied structure in the unincorporated area of the county to pay a fee for waste collection to the county. Part of the fees are used to pay the waste collector who performs the services on behalf of the county pursuant to contract; part of the fees are retained by the county to defray landfill costs.

Garbage collection services are provided to the unincorporated areas only. You ask whether the county may use funds in the general revenue fund which consists of ad valorem revenues as well as non ad valorem funds to cover any deficits in the program.[1] You state that the funds used for the shortfall have not been raised for a particular purpose.[2]

Section 1(h), Art. VIII, State Const., provides:

"Property situate within municipalities shall not be subject to taxation for services rendered by the county exclusively for the benefit of the property or residents in unincorporated areas." [3]

The courts have interpreted the above provision as preventing the taxation of property within a municipality to pay "for services from which the owners of said property received no real or substantial benefit." [4] It is not necessary, however, that the benefit to the municipality be direct and primary, only that it be real and substantial. [5] As stated by The Supreme Court of Florida: [6]

"[S]ubstantial is not necessarily a quantifiable term and a benefit may achieve substantiality without being direct or primary. All that is required is a minimum level of benefit which is not illusory, ephemeral or inconsequential. . . . To meet this test, it is incumbent upon the petitioners to prove a negative--that a service provided by the county and funded by county-wide revenues does not provide real and substantial benefit to the particular municipality." [7] (e.s.)

In considering the proscription in s. 1(h), Art. VIII, supra, The Supreme Court of Florida in City of St. Petersburg v. Briley, Wild & Associates, Inc., [8] held that the construction of a sewer treatment plant and the accompanying reduction in pollution from open sewage discharge was a sufficient benefit to authorize the use of countywide tax moneys to finance the facility even though certain municipalities within the county would not actually use the facilities.

"It is unrealistic to say that the elimination of pollution and contamination of the soils, waters and streams of the unincorporated areas of [the county] will not be of substantial benefit, healthwise and recreation-wise, to the incorporated areas.

We can conceive of services sought to be rendered by a county within a particular unincorporated area which would have no consequential benefits to the municipalities of the county such as, for instance, a library set up in an unincorporated area for the use and benefit of the area residents or, perhaps, a park or recreation facility for the residents of such area. . . . But, in the field of public health a different situation may readily exist." [9]

Thus, in order to comply with s. 1(h), Art. VIII, State Const., county funds obtained in part by taxing property within a municipality situated in the county--which would include moneys in the county's general fund [10]--could not be used to fund waste collection services in the unincorporated areas of the county exclusively unless the provision of such services substantially benefitted the municipality.

The courts have stated, however, that resolution of this constitutional question is substantially a factual determination which can only be made after consideration of the geographical and developmental characteristics of the county and other special circumstances which may be relevant. [11] In light of the Court's decision in City of St. Petersburg v. Briley, Wild & Associates, Inc., supra, it would appear that the collection of waste, thereby eliminating a source of pollution, may well constitute a substantial benefit to the incorporated areas. Such a determination, however, involving mixed questions of law and fact, is one which the county commission must make.[12]

Similarly, the determination as to whether the expenditure of county funds to fund a shortfall in the waste collection program caused by certain citizens' refusal to pay, must be made by the county commission. You state that the appropriation from the general revenue fund is "to act as a cushion in the event of some non-payment [of waste collection fees] by owners." While the nonpaying owners are being sued for such fees, some of the suits may result in noncollectible judgments, thereby resulting in a shortfall in the waste collection program.

The issue as to whether public funds may be expended to fund the shortfall due to the nonpayment of waste collection fees by certain individuals turns on the primary purpose for such an expenditure. Section 10, Art. VII, State Const., prohibits the state or counties, municipalities, or any agency thereof, from using, giving, or lending its taxing power or credit to aid any private interest or individual.

The purpose of the constitutional provision is to protect public funds and resources from being exploited in assisting or promoting private ventures when the public would at most only be incidentally benefitted.[13] However, if the paramount purpose of a public expenditure is a public purpose, the fact that the expenditure may also incidentally benefit private individuals does not violate s. 10, Art. VII, State Const.

The Legislature has recognized that the provision of waste collection by a county serves a county purpose. Pursuant to s. 125.01(1)(k), F.S., the governing body of the county is expressly authorized to provide and regulate waste and sewer collection and disposal in the county.[14]

Accordingly, I am of the opinion that pursuant to the county's home rule powers[15] and based upon appropriate legislative findings, it is a matter of legislative judgment of the county commission whether to expend public funds to fund the shortfall in the county's waste collection program. Such a determination must be made by the county commission and cannot be delegated to this office.[16]

Sincerely,

Robert A. Butterworth
Attorney General

[1] It does not appear the county has established a municipal service taxing unit pursuant to s. 125.01(1)(q)1., F.S. Pursuant to that subsection, a county is authorized to establish such a unit to provide, among other things, garbage and trash collection and disposal and waste and sewer collection and disposal from funds "derived from service charges, special assessments, or taxes within such unit only." (e.s.)
