Attorney General Moody's Week In Review - July 17, 2020

This week, I issued a Consumer Alert to remind Floridians that restitution is still available for victims of tech support scams. However, the deadline is fast approaching and eligible consumers must file a claim soon.

The multimillion dollar claims process is the result of action taken by my Consumer Protection Division to shut down several tech support scams. Seven million dollars is now available to pay victims of these scams, but eligible consumers must act before the Aug. 30 deadline to receive restitution.

Over the past several years, our office has successfully shut down 13 tech support scams—representing the most tech support scam cases filed by any single state agency in the country. Our most recent case involved a company operating out of Sunrise, American PC Corporation.

Tech support scams typically involve fake pop-up messages or imposter phone calls claiming that a consumer's computer is infected with malware that poses an imminent risk to the device. Fraudsters will request virtual access to a victim's computer to supposedly fix the nonexistent problem.

Some tips to avoid tech support scams include:

- NEVER click on links or call phone numbers provided on pop-up ads or emails;

- NEVER give anyone control of personal computers or electronic devices;
- NEVER go online without up-to-date security software; and
- NEVER send money in response to an online solicitation.

By following these simple steps, you can avoid tech support scams and help us build a Stronger, Safer Florida.
